* Warning, this book contains sexual scenes and is intended for readers 18 and over* It's been a wonderful year of growing and being in a good place since Angelique and Trey reunited. However, whenever there is something good, something bad is not too far behind. In their lives, the term 'happily ever after' is becoming difficult to achieve. Out of her coma, Bryn Thornton has been busy getting her life back in order and that has included building a friendship with Angelique. Opening up a new branch of her design company in Pittsburgh, she stuns Angelique by offering her a dream job opportunity she can't refuse. Accepting the position, however, brings forth positive and negative reactions from Trey, and to make things worse, Angelique also has to deal with her new co-worker, Chad Worthington. He's tall, good-looking and minus a few characteristics, he's almost a carbon copy of her husband. She can't put her finger on it, but she can feel in her gut that there's something unscrupulous about him. The issues surfacing around Trey and Angelique are not only restricted to them, and if they aren't careful, they will extend out to their son. No matter how hard they try to rectify things individually for the sake of their family, matters only seem to deteriorate. Secrets have always been a big thing with Angelique, but unfortunately she hasn't fared any better, and the one she has inherited is tearing her apart emotionally. There's a giant bomb ticking that is about to explode. Neither of them has learned from past mistakes and they have taken their second chance of happiness for granted. They say love can conquer all, but will it triumph this time?
