If you have ever been stuck in a traffic jam on a major road during Friday afternoon and seen motorcycles laden down with tents and sleeping bags.

You must have wondered just what those strange looking fellows are up to? This story may well help to explain a little about them and their antics. The actual journey is richly interspersed with the reminiscences of a life spent in hedonistic worship of all that is fun.

It is principally a humorous tale, written in a light hearted style.

The journey begins in Grimsby and ends in Gairloch on the North West Coast of Scotland. It is a work of some truth and some imagination and no Scotsmen were hurt or insulted during the production of this book. Honest.
