Doctor Rick Parker of Seattle has several burning bridges behind him when he goes to work for bail recovery agent Rocco "Angel" DeAngelis. Worse than that, he's just let a bail jumper escape arrest, hurting this month's cash flow. Angel still has enough faith to assign him a new case: find the missing husband of attractive Samantha Norton. Michael Norton stole plans for a new blockbuster drug being developed by his employer, was arrested and then jumped bail. Samantha stands to lose her house and life savings, so she promises a bonus besides the bounty offered by the bail company before she and her autistic savant daughter become home. Parker's only clue takes him to a pay phone outside the office of a private investigator who seems to have a lot to hide. From there the roller coaster ride takes him the length and breadth of the waters around Seattle, literally ending on the high seas.
