Palm reading is probably the most normal thing about Devon's life. When she's asked to be a fortune teller for the college's vintage, carnival, Halloween party, she isn't thrilled. She already has enough on her plate with moving, her son with Asperger's, and her daughter with psychic abilities. Her boyfriend, Ryan, is being harassed by their friends' boy toy. Alice can't see the forest for the trees and keeps thinking everyone will eventually get along. When a Molotov cocktail tries exploding a car during a work party at the college and then a murder takes place at the party, it's up to Devon to figure out what happened. Especially since her dreams won't leave her at peace and everyone thinks she might be going crazy.

Can she serve up the culprit before she serves up the pie for Thanksgiving?
